*Can Germany make peace now?
If not now, when and how?
How goes life inside Germany?
In the towns, the cities, the country?
Are the people back home starving?
What do they eat, what does it cost?
How is it distributed?
Are the Germans losing heart?
Is their view about war changing?
What do they think of their allies?
Of their enemies?
Of America?*

Ambassador Gerard says:

"Throughout the world there is, and should be, deep interest in the conditions — economic, political, spiritual, and military—under which Germany and her allies are sustaining themselves after more than two years of war.

"The facts and impressions contained in this book, gathered first-hand by the author, whose friendship I value and whose professional equipment I admire, form an important contribution to contemporaneous history and possess a referential value for the future. No subject to-day is more vital or worthier of serious attention."

These and other questions are answered in

INSIDE THE GERMAN EMPIRE IN THE THIRD YEAR OF THE WAR

With a Foreword by JAMES W. GERARD, American Ambassador to Germany

By HERBERT BAYARD SWOPE

"Mr. Herbert Bayard Swope has performed a great service to the American public. His observations have been, generally, most careful. His manner of statement, though he deals with difficult generalizations, is lucid. His entire fairness to Germany is indicated by constant effort not to let his admiration for the wonderful defense she is making impinge upon his sense of justice."

Dr. Frank Bohn, in
The New York Times

A RECORD of observations and deductions in Germany during the latter months of 1916; the work of a trained American newspaper man who has just returned from the Kaiser's empire, after being accorded during his visit unusual opportunities to see and study men and affairs.

Mr. Swope's book is a fascinating portrayal of the workings of the most completely organized society in the world. On its pages stand out the marvelous foresight, the almost perfect unity, the iron discipline, which make of seventy millions of men, women, and children a great battling force, whose vanguard is the German army and navy, but whose strength, courage, endurance, and confidence spring from all the people, irrespective of age, position, or sex.

Mr. Swope adds a series of notes of fugitive impressions and random facts that help to give the story life, color, and detail.

A NOVEL POSTAL CENSORSHIP

EVEN the most wholesome legislation may go too far, especially when administered by the undiscriminating hand of our postal authorities at Washington, where in fact the police power of government has been stretched to its utmost limit. It is hoped, as we have many times pointed out, that there may be in the new year such a reorganization of Post Office methods as will settle many vexed questions of the past and free honest periodicals from restrictions that collectively have become an intolerable petty tyranny.

In the campaign for publicity and honest dealing which was waged a few years ago, a federal law was passed which included a provision, of wholesome purpose and in many respects of wholesome effect, requiring that reading matter in newspapers paid for as advertisements should be so marked. This was an item of second-class matter legislation which, it was true, added to the already innumerable details of law and regulations on this subject; but its character was such that it met with little or no objection from honest newspapers, and sensibly curbed an evil in dishonest newspapers. As is usually the case, however, in matters of this kind, the law has been interpreted by the department recently to a reductio ad absurdum. Indeed in a recent case where an automobile speed contest was described in several daily newspapers the Post Office censor ruled that this must be marked "adv." because advertisements of the successful competitor appeared in the same issue of the newspapers in question. There was no claim, apparently, that the news article had been paid for or was other than an honest and timely news story, but the spirit of censorship could not resist the temptation to have a whack at the "offenders."

It is quite possible that no consideration was given to the wide bearings of this ruling and its consequent absurdity. We can speak out from an honest conscience because nothing ever appears as reading matter in the columns of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, or of the other publications of this office, which is paid for directly or indirectly. But a trade paper as a matter of news and record, must in its reading matter columns deal very largely with the subject matter of its advertisements. In other words every trade paper, if this ruling should be logically enforced and proved legally defensible, would be obliged to place "adv." after almost every paragraph in each issue. Book reviews in the Nation, for instance, would have to be marked "adv." no matter how critical and caustic, because a publisher's advertisement in the same issue happened to include the book criticised. But why in the same issue? The alternative would seem to be to placard the word advertisement over the whole of the trade paper—and then the postal censor would find his opportunity to rule it out of second-class matter as "primarily intended for advertising purposes"! But trade papers would not be the only ones in this predicament: newspapers, as in the case cited, are apt to describe, innocently and without thought of remuneration, events more or less distantly connected with subjects dealt with in their advertising columns. Everything said by a periodical, however honestly, might eventually come under the ban.

This aberration of effort is one of the incumbrances from which business men may rightly pray that the Post Office, which has had such splendid successes in many respects during the past year, should during the new year free itself. The business community should not be made to suffer from a spirit of censorship in peace which is quite parallel with the censorship of the nations afflicted with war.

ANOTHER extreme application of a wholesome law, this time directly affecting book publishers, is somewhat in parallel. A publishing house importing bound copies of an English work, entered in ordinary routine the invoices as received by it from abroad. It was then noticed that these invoices did not include one element of value which the Treasury Department had ruled to be a part of the market value. Without question on the point being raised by the appraisers or any other government authority, the publishing house voluntarily and promptly amended its invoices, that it might pay the full duty without question. Instead of appreciating this honesty, the Treasury authorities ruled that the making of the correction showing an increase of value above the original invoices, tho made by the importers of their own accord, nevertheless subjected them to the same penalty as tho they had been found guilty of deliberately fraudulent invoicing. It would seem that this discouragement of honesty should not be necessary, and that either the law should be amended or should be administered with more common-sense.

THE English Society of Authors has issued an explanatory statement regarding the new Trading with the Enemy (Copyright) Act, 1916, to which they desire us to give publicity, as we are, of course, glad to do. They state that "an entirely false idea" of the act "has sprung up among the neutral nations" which they desire to correct. We confess, in spite of all the "explanations" issued, we are still unable to see either the necessity for this act at all, or, if the Law Officers of the Crown felt that the original Trading with the Enemy Act had unwittingly or unintentionally abrogated the Berne Convention, why, instead of the new Act, a simple corrective or amendatory provision was not passed specifically excepting the Berne Convention from the scope of the original general Trading with the Enemy Act. We are glad to note that nowhere has any desire been expressed to make the abrogation of the Berne Convention an excuse for seizing unprotected literary personal property; and if, under the new, and we trust very temporary, Act, the Public Trustee functions as our good friends in England assure us that he will, less harm may be done to international copyright relations than we had feared. We regret still that any question of the validity of international copyright protection during war time should have been raised at all by Great Britain; but we are glad to record that, having raised it, Great Britain evidently intends to treat the problems involved in her own fashion but nevertheless with her traditional fairness.

It has always been our practice to list, by re-entry in the "Weekly Record of News Publications," all changes of price on books. The sweeping increases of price during the past few months, covering literally thousands of titles, and including in some cases the entire lists of publishing houses, have rendered the continuance of this practice, temporarily at least, impossible. We shall make a special effort to call attention to all the more important of these changes in the review of the year in our Annual Summary Number.

ENGLISH AUTHORS ISSUE STATEMENT REGARDING NEW COPYRIGHT ACT

THE attention of the Committee of Management of the Incorporated Society of Authors, Playwrights and Composers in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland has been called to statements which have recently appeared in the Press both in this country and abroad, commenting upon The Trading with the Enemy (Copyright) Act, 1916, in relation to the obligations of this country as a signatory to the International Copyright Convention of Berne. The Committee have carefully considered this legislation and the various opinions expressed in the Press and desire to put on record their views as to its results.

The Committee are satisfied that so far from being a breach of the International Convention this Act is an acknowledgment of its continued effectiveness and will preserve for German authors rights of which otherwise they ran some risk of being deprived.

The Act was passed in order to remove doubts which had arisen as to whether the state of war between Great Britain and Germany had not determined the International Convention of Berne so far as those two countries were concerned, and thus deprived German authors of copyright in Great Britain for their works produced during the war. This Committee do not propose to discuss whether these doubts were well founded; it is sufficient that they were felt by eminent lawyers, including the Law Officers of the Crown, and since they were felt it was clearly necessary for the protection of the rights intended to be created by the International Convention that they should be set at rest. The Act accordingly declares that copyright exists in all such works. It is clear that up to this point, so far from infringing in any way the International Convention, the Act gives effect, notwithstanding the war, to the intention of that Convention.

The Act proceeds to vest these copyrights in the Public Trustee as Custodian of enemy property in Great Britain, and the Committee think that it is a misapprehension of the reason for, and the effects of, this provision which has caused adverse criticism. The effect of the International Copyright Convention was to create so far as Germans were concerned German property, namely copyrights in the United Kingdom. The Trading with the Enemy (Copyright) Act, 1916, declares that notwithstanding the war such property is still being created, and it is thus an acknowledgment of the Convention and of German rights under it. But during the war the Law Courts in Great Britain are not open to Germans. They cannot sue or protect their property in any way, just as conversely British subjects cannot sue in Germany. For this and other reasons all the belligerent Governments have claimed and exercised the right to take possession of such of the property of the subjects of hostile states as is within their jurisdiction.

This right Great Britain has exercised as regards every kind of property by giving power to vest or actually vesting it in a Public Official, who is to hold it during the war, protect it from infringement, and afterwards deal with it as shall be directed by Order in Council; that is, in effect, in accordance with the terms of the treaty of peace. The Act extends this treatment to copyrights originating during the war in an enemy country, which would otherwise be subject without legal remedy to indiscriminate piracy. The total effect of the Act therefore is that it admits the validity of the International Copyright Convention of Berne notwithstanding the war, recognizes that the copyright in German books is property vested in the German authors, and provides that such property shall be treated neither better nor worse, but in just the same way as all other German property in Great Britain.

So far therefore as German authors are concerned the Committee cannot think that their rights under the Convention have been infringed. Are then non-belligerent signatories to the International Convention in any way injuriously affected? The Committee after careful consideration have only been able to find one such case. If a neutral publishes a book for the first time in Germany during the war it would seem that his copyright would pass to the Public Custodian under the Act. The Committee believe that this was a result neither intended nor foreseen by the Authorities and are making representations to the British Government with a view to its rectification. It has also been suggested that if a neutral purchases the British rights in a book published in Germany during the war he is injured by the Act and his rights under the International Convention are infringed. But what such a neutral purchases is German property in an enemy country, and everyone who purchases such property during hostilities necessarily does so subject to the right of the belligerent Government to take possession of such property; and this applies not merely to copyrights but to all forms of enemy property, and to British property in Germany just as much as to German property in Great Britain. Moreover, the Act contains special provision for mitigating any hardship on this account in the case of any person who has made such a purchase before the Act came into force.

The Committee regret that this Act was passed without previous reference to this Society, whose members are deeply interested in and much affected by any legislation in regard to International Copyright. Misapprehension has, in their opinion, been caused by the very summary form of the Act, and this might well have been avoided if the Government had consulted representatives of authors who have at least as much interest in and knowledge of this subject as the trade organizations which alone appear to have been approached.

But they are convinced that when the Act comes to be understood it will be seen that it proceeds from a desire to protect International Copyright during a time of war, and treats belligerent property in copyrights as other belligerent property may and ought to be treated while war continues.

Signed on behalf of the Committee of Management of the Incorporated Society of Authors, Playwrights, and Composers:

STANLEY LEATHES, Chairman.
G. HERBERT THRING, Secretary.

ANNUAL DINNER OF THE BROTHERHOOD OF COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

FOR the thirty-second time in its history of as many years, the Brotherhood of Commercial Travelers, cheerful and young as ever, sat down to its annual banquet at the Waldorf-Astoria on Thursday evening, December 28. The legend is that the late George Boldt, the famous director of the hostelry, had two great ambitions in life—one was to cater in a perfectly flawless fashion to every guest, and the other was to outlive the B. C. T. He succeeded in one aim, but failed in the other, and it looks now that should his successor register a similar ambition the Brotherhood would score another victory in the course of time.

The president of the Brotherhood, C. C. Schepmoes, kept things going in a masterful way during the long evening. The first ceremony was the time-honored one of bestowing the insignia of office on the retiring president, which function was performed by the dean of the Old Guard, "Uncle Bill" Kelly, who succeeded in finishing his eloquent address, with its tearful finale, despite many interruptions. After "Skep" was decorated, he introduced Millard D. Heise, president of the Associated Commercial Travelers, who made a plea for aggressive organization in the fraternity of the road. Clarence H. Carter, a former representative of Little, Brown & Co., followed with a witty budget of reminiscences of the good days on the Pacific coast, ending with a recitation of the Hon. Edward J. Phelps's poem, the first stanza of which reads as follows:

ESSEX JUNCTION

With saddened face and battered hat,
And eye that told of blank despair,
On wooden bench a traveler sat,
Cursing the fate that brought him there;

Nine hours, he said, we've lingered here,
With thoughts intent on distant homes,
Waiting for that delusive train
Which, always coming, never comes;

Till weary and worn, sad and forlorn,
And paralyzed in every function—
I hope in hell
Their souls may dwell
Who first invented Essex Junction.

Norman H. White, president of Small, Maynard & Co. and a former member of the Massachusetts Legislature, was the next speaker, with a message with a punch on the subject of co-operative life insurance. Others "who also" talked were Charles E. Graham, the B. C. T. president for 1917; H. V. Patterson, of the "Younger Set," which is sometimes referred to as the nursery of the Brotherhood; and last of all, William J. Barse, known as the only Irvin Cobb of the book-trade. A vocal quartette interluded the talks and stimulated the singing. The two souvenirs were practical ones for travelers—a collapsible form for pressing trousers and a gold tie holder, suitably dated. Midnight found the brethren saying "Good Night" with beaming smiles and the feeling of a happy night well spent.

The following report on the dinner from one of our special correspondents arrived just in time for insertion in this issue:

ARCHIE AT THE WALDORF-ASTORIA

(with apologies to Don Marquis)

well boss you surely handed me a tough little job when you assigned me to study
the habits and instincts of those book peddlers
at the waldorf astoria last night especially as all I had had to eat
all day
was an ancient bit of your stenographer's lunch that mehitabel had passed up i doped out a plan to pipe them right as they arrived my best friend is the star detective of the waldorf and wears what he calls plain clothes but gee they are from the twenty two-fifty-per-suit stack
i got ya said he i know that bunch and can hand you the dope
follow me and we strolled innocent
like towards the cafe
i sat down in a handy crack under the free lunch counter he said
keep your glimmers peeled they will come in here for a ball and beat it out like greased piston
rods
sure enough the first to nod to my friend the detec was a fenian with mutton chop whiskers cut thick and a mustache to connect them he joyfully made as if to line up
but suddenly swung about and took the elevator holy smoke said the detec whats struck jawhn has he signed up with billy bryan
then pretty soon three of a kind one of them they called billy came along and walked the beaten path towards the mixers foot rest but a whisper from one steered them all to the lift i got uneasy and said the boss set me to study them at close range but how can i get close if they all shun the cheerful lights believe me said my friend i am eternally stumped and gosh swoggled i thought i knew the brethren but they have my nanny tonight hist said he i will pussy foot and unveil this deep mystery i hung around and saw still others come and glance at the joy joint and pass on one in particular made a big cheerful noise in spite of his getting on they called him uncle bill but whose uncle he is i could not find out boss i am sorry the assignment you gave me miscarried if you had got me one of those cards marked ten i could have gotten in and mixed with the bunch and watched them behave behind the closed doors well pretty soon my friend got back and whispered low like but as it was only rumor i cannot set it down as fact and facts you told me to get and cut out the gossip so i will tell you on the quiet what he said it is only the word of the head waiter and so it cannot be called honest to god truth but the rumor was that a big bowl

and a ladle backed by a garcon in the feed hall served clam juice to the thirsty and when he said clam juice my friend the detective batted his right eye in a wise way
that is all i could find out about that bunch and i leave it to you to insert clam juice or leave a dash
i will mail this on my way home in a swell
dame's back hair
where i hopped as she went thru the alley
give me another chance boss and pin to it next time
a real meal ticket.

THE SWEDISH BOOK-TRADE NOW DOMINATED BY GERMANY

HOW THE SWEDISH BOOK-TRADE IS ORGANIZED—
ALL BOOKS "ON SALE" AND ON A YEAR'S CREDIT
—WHY GERMANY CONTROLS HER FOREIGN BOOK-TRADE

HJALMAR LUNDBERG, secretary of the Swedish Booksellers' Association, has set forth a number of interesting facts regarding the organization of the Swedish book-trade in a brochure in French, "Projet de vente internationale de livres," issued by him in Stockholm in the spring of this year. With the exception of the larger bookstores, most Swedish dealers now get their English and French books thru Leipzig or Copenhagen, Herr Lundberg points out, and it is in the hope of interesting English and French publishers to deal directly with the Scandinavian market that he has compiled the present brochure.

Altho much stock is purchased outright by Swedish retailers, yet the "on sale" privilege is a fundamental trade practice. All booksellers ("sortimentare")—there are some 160 of them in Sweden—are officially authorized by the Swedish Publishers' Association, and, as in Germany, strict trade regulations regarding discounts, payment of bills, etc., have been established by agreement between publishers and retailers. New Swedish books are sent out simultaneously to all Swedish booksellers "on sale" thru a single forwarding house in Stockholm. The booksellers have the exclusive right of selling all new books for the two years following publication, their discounts on "on sale" books being 30 per cent. Thru its secretary, the Swedish Publishers' Association keeps a record of the amount owed each publisher by each bookseller, and the latter are expected to settle all bills annually, on April 1.

This matter of the annual settlement of accounts has been found absolutely essential in Sweden on account of the extensive use of the "on sale" privilege. As bills are made up from the figures of each bookseller's inventory, payments more frequently than once a year would, of necessity, require correspondingly frequent inventories.

When an edition of a particular book begins to run low, the publisher recalls "on sale" copies by inserting a notice in the trade paper. All copies not returned at such a time are regarded as no longer "on sale" and are charged to the bookseller's account.

It has been customary in the past to require most booksellers to deposit bond before they were allowed to start in business, but for the last two years booksellers and publishers have united in an interesting experiment in co-operative insurance, the "Svenska bokhandelns ömsesidiga garantiförsäkringsförening." Already $30,000 has been raised for this fund and it is expected that it will reach the $200,000 mark in ten years. The interest from this sum, about $7500 annually, will, it is calculated, be sufficient to protect publishers against the rather infrequent retail failures.

All Swedish booksellers belong to a national booksellers' association which looks after their interests by means of a central executive committee and by a special representative in Stockholm. The latter is also secretary of the trade guarantee association referred to above.

The excellent internal organization of the German book-trade has hardly excelled the systematic organization of the German export trade judging from its practical working in Sweden. Altho many Swedish booksellers prefer to order thru Copenhagen or Stockholm, Leipzig has become the chief source of supply for the Scandinavian trade. Two things have been especially influential in swinging Scandinavian trade to Leipzig, the readiness of the German publishers to export books on the "on sale" basis, and the excellent catalogs with which the Germans keep Scandinavian booksellers continually supplied, gratis. Thru the general "on sale" arrangements the Reklam library, such collections as Göschen and l'Universal, the Velhagen and Klassing monographs, and the Brockhaus school books have gained very wide circulation, while works on architecture, medicine and engineering come almost exclusively from Germany. The German catalogs are in wide use, and according to Herr Lundberg, when a certain book published abroad is wanted the Swedish bookseller looks first in his German catalog. Thus many English and French books—especially those wanted by the smaller retailers—come via Leipzig.

All the larger book-stores have their special agent in Leipzig who keeps them supplied with the latest books every week or every month. Settlement for all "on sale" stock is, as in Sweden, made annually tho certain German publishers require a small deposit on "on sale" books from dealers with whom they are not well acquainted. To obviate the difficulty of annual payments in the case of certain of the smaller publishers who could not well afford to have their capital tied up so long, certain of the larger Leipzig export agents, according to Herr Lundberg, shift this burden to their own shoulders. These agents likewise assist such retailers as may have at any particular time to lay in a larger stock than their capital would normally allow.

Regarding the amount of the trade in French and English books in Sweden, Herr Lundberg says that they constitute about one-tenth of the total retail business. According to the figures for 1911, Sweden imported from England, France and Belgium a little over 500,000 francs of books. The French and German books imported via Germany amounted to about one-tenth of the total German import, or about 185,000 francs.

Herr Lundberg urges French and English publishers to enter the Scandinavian market, but considering the general "on sale" custom and the consequent credit difficulties it hardly seems likely that English publishers will soon attempt to invade the Scandinavian territory to anything like the extent the Germans have done. The apathy of the English trade in this regard is instanced by the fact that in March the Publishers' Circular printed a notice of Herr Lundberg's brochure, offering to reprint it "if even only half a dozen British publishers" wrote asking for details, and to date no further mention of the brochure has appeared.

DELAY IN GIVING NOTICE OF INFRINGEMENT MAY PREVENT RECOVERY FROM INNOCENT INFRINGER

A CASE of a proprietor of a copyright withholding notice of infringement to allow the infringer to exploit an article to the limit so that the damages recovered may be the larger was furnished in the case of Haas v. Leo Feist, tried before Judge Hand in the District Court, S. D., New York, on May 23, 1916 (234 F. R. 105). Infringement was established by the evidence, and the defendant's ignorance of the fact that his employee had infringed plaintiff's song did not of course alter the latter's right to recover damages. The infringing work, the song, "I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier," was copyrighted as a published work on January 5, 1915, sold 650,000 copies in three months, and had run its course and disappeared from the market by January 28, 1916, when plaintiff sued for infringement. Three men shared the profits of the infringed song; of these one noted the likeness of the infringing song before it was ever published, a second heard it a few weeks after publication and commented upon its likeness to number one, and the third did not appear to have had personal notice of the infringing song.

"It must be obvious to every one familiar with equitable principles," said Judge Hand, "that it is inequitable for the owner of a copyright, with full notice of an intended infringement, to stand inactive while the proposed infringer spends large sums of money in its exploitation, and to intervene only when his speculation has proved a success. Delay under such circumstances allows the owner to speculate without risk with the other's money; he cannot possibly lose, and he may win. If the defendant be a deliberate pirate, this consideration might be irrelevant, and I think it such as to Piantadosi [the employee who wrote the song]; but it is no answer to such inequitable conduct, if the defendant Feist is innocent, to say that its innocence alone will not protect it. It is not its innocence, but the plaintiff's availing himself of that innocence to build up a success at no risk of his own, which a court of equity should regard."

Judge Hand granted an injunction and an accounting. "There must be costs, since the statute requires it," he held, "but there will be no attorney's allowance, for that rests in discretion. There were no damages (for there was nothing of value to injure) unless the accounting turns out wholly in favor of the defendants, in which case the damages against Feist will be $250." With regard to the accounting, Judge Hand held that the employee of defendant, who was the one really responsible for the infringement, must account "without condition," but upon the defendant Feist's accounting, the master, after first stating the account in full, with proper credits for all the exploitation of the song, and ascertaining the net profits, was ordered to consider the damages due the three owners of the infringed song as follows: In the case of the first member of the trio since his knowledge of the infringement went back to a time before the publication of the defendant's song and he had not served notice of infringement, plaintiff was debarred from recovering one-third of the profits, since defendant did most of its exploitation after plaintiff knew of the proposed infringement. Second plaintiff, who first learned of infringement after publication, was debarred of any damages for infringement after his first notice and failure to warn defendant, "provided the defendant spent substantial sums in exploiting the song thereafter." As to the third party, who apparently knew nothing of the infringement, the master was to consider "whether his one-third, while he had title, was not affected by notice of the proposed infringement, and, if so, to what extent."

NOTICE VITIATED BY USE OF ILLEGAL NAME

A rehearing of the above was moved upon new proof and on June 8, the same judge allowed defendant's claim and dismissed the bill with costs (234 F. R. 109). Plaintiff had applied for copyright, as an unpublished work of music in his own name but printed copies gave the copyright owner as a company. When asked to correct the discrepancy he said he was president and treasurer of the company. Both company and name were fictitious, which is against the law of New York State. In allowing defendant's claim and dismissing the case, Judge Hand said in part:

"It therefore must be still held an open question whether his [plaintiff's] use of an illegal name would disqualify him from suing there [in equity]. That question in my judgment does not arise here, as I shall show hereafter, and I wish it to be distinctly understood that I do not dismiss this bill on the theory that the plaintiff does not come into equity with clean hands. The vice in my judgment goes to the notice itself and the statute forbids a suit where notice has not been given. Section 12. Yet I can hardly think that the courts of New York would permit a plaintiff to protect an illegal name, for example, against unfair trade use, if that question arose.

"In Jenner v. Shope, supra, it was held that a contract for the sale of a partnership name used illegally by the plaintiff's decedent was itself illegal and could not be enforced. The case shows, if proof be necessary, that the use is illegal for all purposes, and, that being so, I think that Deutsch [plaintiff] had no right to use the name upon his notices. It was not, therefore, the 'name of the copyright proprietor,' as intended by section 18. The plaintiff urged that such a doctrine would allow a state statute to control the copyright law; but when that law required copyright proprietors to affix their names it certainly intended only such names as they may lawfully use under the law of their domicile. It cannot be supposed that Congress intended to make that lawful in this instance within a state which the state made unlawful for every other purpose. Doubtless Congress might have the power to make such an enactment, but so to interpret this statute would presuppose a wanton purpose of discord. It seems to me wholly fanciful to suppose that Congress intended to permit the use of names which it was a crime under the state law to use."

NOTES ON THE PAPER SITUATION

WITH THE FEBRUARY ISSUE, the price of all illustrated monthly magazines in London will be increased to seven pence (about fourteen cents), according to a special agreement signed by the Strand, Pearson's, Windsor, London Wide World, Woman at Home, Nash's and the Royal.

A DECREE of King Alfonso of Spain authorizes a special appropriation of $180,000 to help the Spanish daily papers in the present paper crisis. The Spanish Government will guarantee to the associated paper mills of Spain the difference between the price of paper for daily periodicals as sold in July, 1914, and the price now prevailing. The sum devoted to this purpose is granted in the form of a loan to be disbursed and repaid according to arrangements with the treasury officials, two representatives of the daily press and the director general of the so-called Spanish paper trust.

THE FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION conducted an all-day conference on December 16, participated in by paper manufacturers and publishers of city dailies and country weeklies. The present condition of the market was discussed from every point of view and statements about stocks on hand, possible outcome for the coming year and the demands of the consumers were made by every interest represented. The upshot of the conference was the sending of a questionnaire to the newspapers in all sections of the country to ascertain the actual extent of the paper shortage. When the information is returned paper manufacturers, jobbers and newspaper publishers will be called for a final conference to discuss a proposed scheme to insure a proper paper supply to small publishers. Paper manufacturers were called into conference Dec. 28 by the commission to discuss certain phases of the situation.

REPORTS from the foreign paper, chemical and technical pulp markets show that prices remain firm and unchanged. The News-Print Manufacturers' Association, in a digest of the situation just issued, says: "Portugal is offering 5 cents a pound for news-print f. o. b. steamer New York. Scandinavian news-print is being offered in the New York market at 5 $\frac{1}{4}$ cents a pound f. o. b. New York, based on a \$5 freight rate (practically ballast rate.) According to the American mill representatives in Australia, Japan is selling news-print in Australia at five cents per pound. The immediate needs of Russia are evidently being taken care of by large importations of Finnish pulp. There are many new paper mills being built and projected in Russia, and the railroad systems are co-operating closely with the movement. "In England the recent change of government will undoubtedly have the effect of decidedly curtailing the importation of pulp and paper. Buyers seem to be reasonably certain of an amicable adjustment of the Swedish pulp situation very shortly, and expect that Sweden will immediately thereafter ship chemical pulp to England."

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES

P. BLAKISTON'S SON & Co. are sending out a list of fifty of their books on which prices have been changed.

A NEW Eleanor H. Porter book, "The Road to Understanding," is announced by Houghton Mifflin Co. for March 24.

ROBERT FROST, author of "North of Boston" and "Mountain Interval," is to be professor of English at Amherst from January to the end of the college year.

THE STATE TEACHERS' ASSOCIATIONS of both Nebraska and Colorado recently passed unanimous endorsements of simplified spelling.

RAND, McNALLY & COMPANY announce that Dr. William H. Mace, for twenty-five years head of the history department of Syracuse University, has been appointed editor of their educational texts.

J. M. DENT & SONS, London, are following up their Collection Gallia of French classics with a new Spanish series, La Colección Iberia. This series will cover both classic and contemporary Spanish writers and sells in England for one shilling net per volume.

THE 1917 BOOK-TRADE PROGRAM opens with three Little Brown novels which are coming on the 3rd of January: "The Hillman" by E. Phillips Oppenheim, "The Unwelcome Man" by Waldo Frank and "The Twenty-Four" by George Fitch.

EDWARD J. CLODE announces the marriage of his most popular hero, Torchy, in a new volume of Torchy stories appropriately named "Wilt Thou Torchy." The same house is publishing Louis Tracy's "The Postmaster's Daughter," in which, apparently, the author abandons desert islands and tells a thoroughgoing detective story.

J. B. CARRINGTON, for many years one of the editors of Scribner's Magazine, recently gave his interesting lecture on American Illustrators at the Metropolitan Museum in New York City. Mr. Carrington's personal comments on the artists and on the old days of wood-engraving and the developing of the half-tone were of special interest.

ROBERT H. DODD announces that the price to original subscribers for the "American Book Prices Current for 1916," now in preparation, will be $10, an increase due to higher manufacturing costs and to the fact that the new volume will contain approximately twenty per cent. more material than the one for last year.

AMONG THE BOOKS announced by Robert J. Shores for the coming year are "Dollars and Cents" and "Bucking the Tiger," novels by Albert Payson Terhune and Achmed Abdullah, respectively; a volume of poems by J. M. Lewis; "Our United States" by Helen S. Wright; and "The Destiny of the United States" by Snell Smith of the Washington Post.

THE CENTURY CO. announces the early publication of "My Twenty Thousand Partners," by Charles M. Schwab. In this little book the famous steel magnate tells about the inner workings of the Bethlehem corporation and describes the human qualities that make for practical success. That business man on whom the bookseller is now concentrating his hopeful attention might be roused from his preoccupation by just such a book as this.

RUDYARD KIPLING celebrates his fifty-first birthday to-day. Mr. Kipling has served the government in various ways, and during the year about all that he has written, either prose or poetry, has been of the war. Kipling's works, say his publishers, are enjoying greater popularity to-day than they did a dozen years ago, outselling the record of a decade past, in some cases by fifteen to one, in other cases by ten to one.

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & Co. have issued a well-written little forty-page booklet describing the various scenes and mechanical processes shown in their three thousand foot film on the Making of a Book. Tho the film is so well captioned as to be wellnigh "fool-proof," booksellers, librarians and others showing the film will find that the running comment to be found in the booklet gives much additional information—especially about the technical processes—quite necessary to any adequate comprehension of the film.

IGNORANCE OF THE law excuses no bridge player—especially since the John C. Winston Company is careful to keep its bridge handbook strictly up-to-date. The laws of 1917 are included in "Auction Declarations" by Milton C. Work, published on the first day of the New Year. The principles underlying each declaration are explained and a system which makes it easy to define the best bid in any given hand is worked out. The volume has 288 pages, including a glossary, index and summary of penalties.

SIR FREDERICK MACMILLAN has written to the London Times pointing out the objections from the publishers' point of view to the system of sending out books on "sale or return," so common in Germany. He says that when he visited Leipzig in 1902 to attend the International Congress of Publishers he made careful inquiries as to the working of the system, and was told by several German publishers that they found it very troublesome and unprofitable, and that if they could manage to get rid of it they would be only too glad to do so.

THE latest drama magazine, a new illustrated quarterly The Theatre Arts Magazine, will make its first appearance in December. It will be edited by Sheldon Cheney, with Winthrop Ames, Walter Prichard Eaton, Charles Rann Kennedy, Percy MacKaye and others, as associate editors. The scope of the magazine is broad. It aims to cover staging, acting, dramatic poetry, scene and costume designing, aesthetic dancing and theatre architecture. It is published from the Arts and Crafts Theatre, Detroit, Mich., at $1.50 a year.

THE OLD-ESTABLISHED Edinburgh firm of Nimmo, Hay & Mitchell has just been registered as a limited liability company, with Mr. J. H. Bruce, for many years its manager, as director, and it is expected that under the new auspices the firm will take a fresh lease of life. The business, which was founded in 1859 by W. P. Nimmo, is known in the British trade for its fine line of gift and birthday books and of leather classics. In addition to the rights and stock the new company has acquired the premises of the firm at 18 Clyde Street, Edinburgh, and for the convenience of the English trade is opening a London branch.

THE PROGRESSIVE BOOKSTORE cannot have too many first aids to book-buying within reach of its customers. An innovation in this line in the Lord & Taylor Book Shop in New York City is the binding of book review publications in a permanent form which renders not only the latest review but all reviews for the past half year readily accessible to its patrons. The heavy leather binder, gold stamped and thoroly in keeping with the store, is kept on the big center table where it will invite browsing. The bound reviews are proving serviceable both to those who have read a review at home and forgotten the title and author, and to that particular type of book-buyer who wants "a book" but is confused rather than aided by the presence of shelf upon shelf of possible purchases.

LONDON has recently become possessed of a book-shop of the Lord & Taylor type thru the establishment of the London Literary Lounge in Clifford Street by Messrs. Truslove & Hanson. The shop occupies the former reading room and billiard room of the well known old Long's Hotel. Books and pictures are ranged about the walls of the long room while the center is kept clear for comfortable chairs and library tables upon which periodicals and a book or so are casually displayed. The room has the advantage of literary memories all its own. It was here that Lord Byron and Sir Walter Scott talked together upon the last occasion on which they met; and it was here that Charles Dickens pictured Cousin Feenix as staying, on his visit to London for the wedding ceremony of his amiable relative, Mrs. Dombey. The shop announced its opening by a full page spread in the London Times Literary Supplement.

OF ESPECIAL INTEREST to ad. copy writers is the Multiplex Copy-Riter, the recent invention of the Hammond Typewriter Co. enabling one to prepare copy in various type sizes and faces just as it will appear when printed. We noted briefly recently the invention of the machine. Further details, just come to hand, state that with this machine type may be selected from hundreds of type-faces, from six-point "body" up to 18-point display, and arranged in an instantly interchangeable form. two different sets are on the machine at one time, either brought into play simply by turning a knob, or both can be removed and others slipped on instantly. There is also an arrangement providing for the immediate adjustment of the various spacing required for the different sizes of type. The efficiency of the Copy-Riter is not based on any speed that is ordinarily associated with typewriters; in that respect it is comparatively slow; the saving is in time, patience, and cost of resetting. Copy can be prepared in foreign languages also. The machine is portable, weighing about 17 pounds.

OPPONENTS OF PRICE MAINTENANCE are making final preparations to present their arguments at the hearings on the Stephens bill, which will be held before the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce on January 5 and 6. The hearings were originally set for Friday and Saturday, December 15 and 16, but upon representations by the National Trade Association and the National Retail Dry Goods Association, which are leading the opposition, were postponed until after the holiday period. In view of the claims of the supporters of the measure that a very large proportion of all Congressmen have pledged their support to the measure, it is understood that the fight of the opposition will be directed principally toward killing the bill before the committee. If the Stephens bill is not reported by the committee at this session, it will necessitate the introduction of another bill when the newly constituted Congress meets next year. It is understood that, besides Congressman Stephens, seven members of the committee are strongly in favor of the bill and an almost equal number against it.

ACCORDING TO THE latest reports from Washington the newspaper and periodical publishers have won their attempt to stave off for another year any increase of second-class mail rates. The Postmaster-General, it will be recalled, altho himself a publisher, recommended such an increase, as have all his predecessors, in his annual report. Later he withdrew this recommendation on the ground that he considered it unfair to place this extra burden on publications this year, already suffering, as they all are, from high paper costs. The Post Office Committee of the House evidently, however, did not feel that periodicals should be longer favored and reported the increase favorably. As a "rider" to an appropriation bill the measure has, however, to pass the gauntlet of the Rules Committee and here, we are told, it has been effectually quashed. It is said that the Committees have been deluged by letters and telegrams of protest, particularly from the so-called "mail order" periodicals of huge circulation at nominal prices, and from the scores of little religious and agricultural papers which are already skating on very thin ice financially.

IN MARKED CONTRAST to the movement for cheaper letter postage in this country is the trend in the opposite direction in certain quarters in England, where war taxes are urging many new government economics: "Among the existing taxes which ought to be increased without delay are the postal rates," says an article in the London Economist. "It is a scandal that the post office should continue to sort, carry and deliver halfpenny postcards and halfpenny circulars; that the charges for parcels should be altogether insufficient to cover the cost involved, and that the telegraph and telephone services should be conducted at a loss. The halfpenny postcard naturally yields little, if any, revenue to the state, but it cuts into the revenue from penny letters. The halfpenny circular acts in the same way, and in addition is often fraudulently used for business communications which are essentially of the character of letters. By raising the charges for postcards and circulars to a penny, not only would there be a considerable saving of labor in the post office—with a substantial increase of revenue—but there would also be a saving to the nation of paper and of printing. There is no reason why the charge for letters should not be doubled also. There is no sanctity in the penny letter, and at present it leads to a great waste of time and ink and paper and labor in sorting and carrying. The parcel post rates should be raised to a paying basis."

BY THE FIFTEENTH of January Doubleday, Page & Company will have ready their first batch of 1917 books, a half-dozen titles of rather unusual interest. The novel of the collection, "The Balance," is by a new author, Francis Bellamy, who is said to be something of a discovery. He writes of a man whose remarkable success as a playwright proves his great handicap—for the public has mistaken his seriously written work for a sensational sex play and demands more of the same sort. Lieut. Col. E. D. Swinton, known as "Eye-Witness," has written some war stories—not necessarily of the present war—under the arresting title "The Great Tab Dope." The author, it is said, carried out the idea of the British "tanks." "England and the War" by André Chevillon, with a preface by Rudyard Kipling, throws light on the principles for which England is fighting and explains some of the diplomatic entanglements of the present situation. "The Russian Advance" by Stanley Washburn is a continuation of "Victory in Defeat" which covered the first phase of the war. In conjunction with the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, Doubleday, Page & Company are publishing "Benjamin Franklin, Printer" by John Clyde Oswald of The American Printer and "The Awakening of Business" by Edward N. Hurley, Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission. The latter, a most practical and farsighted volume for the business man or, indeed, for anyone interested in the problems of politics and economics, shows the basic principles of co-operation between government and business which alone can bring permanent prosperity.

SEPTEMBER 27 was the fiftieth anniversary of the beginning of the continuous activities of Ivan Dmitrievich Sytin, the greatest publisher in Russia. In addition to books and magazines, according to the Petrograd correspondent of the London Times, he publishes perhaps the wealthiest and most widely circulated newspaper in Russia, the Russkoe

Slovo, the members of whose editorial staff are now taking an active part in the organization of a special jubilee celebration for January 12 next. It is also proposed to commemorate the occasion by founding in the city of Moscow a House of the Book (Dom Knigi), which shall serve as an "elementary, middle, and higher school for all branches of book production—an academy, a university of the printing business." In the Book House the publisher and printer will find in a permanently filled museum samples of the best and technically most complete editions, and can study all the latest improvements of the printing business. In the laboratories and workshops of the Book House experiments will be conducted with new kinds of paper, new colors, new type-setting machines, presses, etc. Here will be engaged competent compositors working on the most up-to-date type-setting machines, under the supervision of experienced foremen. It is hoped to make of this establishment the nucleus of an enterprise which in time will be capable of rivaling the most advanced countries of the world in the production of art publications. Incidentally, an American cannot but smile at the misinformation of the chairman of the jubilee committee as reported by the Petrograd correspondent. The latter is quoted as pointing out that in working out the details of the Book House the promoters must take as their model not Europe, but America, where "everything is dear save books," where, thanks to the colossal development of technical skill, the productions of the printing press are so cheap that "even England, the land of free trade, had to impose a high duty upon imported printed matter in order to save her book industry from ruin from the unbearable competition of disproportionately cheap English books printed in America."

PICK-UPS

AN OLD ONE IN A NEW DRESS

"You see," said the country editor, "I have printed your poem." "Thank you," responded the poet. "I suppose I shall receive remuneration according to your usual tariff?" "Tariff? My good man, poetry is on the free list."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

MADE TO ORDER

One day an old farmer dropped into the office of a country newspaper, and, after paying his year's subscription, said to the proprietor: "Look here, old man, I'm getting along in years and my eyes are not as good as they used to be; now I want you to do me a favor—print my copy in larger type." Then, slapping down a half-crown, he added: "I reckon that will pay for the extra expense."—British and Colonial Printer and Stationer.

DEAD BOOKS

One day I climbed the hill near Subiaco, which is in the mountains of Italy, not remote from Rome. There I visited an old monastery and a brother showed me the library, wherein I was allowed to browse as long as I pleased. There were hundreds of books, beautifully bound in vellum, many of them written by hand upon parchment.

I came away rather sad. I had dug into many books. They must have been written at great pains by men under serious impulses. Lives had been poured into those books. And now, while the volumes themselves would be priceless for a collector, the ideas in them were as dry and useless as the dead leaves in the monastery courtyard.

The subjects discussed interest nobody any more. Even the manner of reasoning is entirely worthless. Not a living soul, except an antiquary, if such have living souls, would read one of the books through.

I wonder if, ten centuries from now, the books which to-day thrill us will seem as wormy and tomb-like. Dead men impress one with the brevity of life; how much more dead books!—From DR. FRANK CRANE'S "Footnotes to Life."—(Lane.)

BOOKS WE DO NOT INTEND TO BUY

II.—THE BULL-DOZIA ENCYCLOPEDIA

Second on Mr. Gooch's list of undesirable books is the famous and widely advertised Bull-Dozia Encyclopedia. He quotes from the advertising circular. "It is headed," he writes, "by a cut of an offensive-looking man in a frock-coat—half-way between a patent medicine vendor and a third-class revivalist. This person is represented as saying: 'Now I have the Bull-Dozia, I can answer any question you put."

The text of the advertisement follows:

Are You Really Educated?
Or Are You Ignorant?
Do You Know:
Whether a walrus can stand on his hind legs?
How old Cicero's mother lived to be?
What is the highest of the Ozark Mountains?
Why grass is not pink?
Who will be the next king of Nyajamba-Nyajamba?
What a woodchuck thinks about?
How much Louis XIV weighed?
How long it would take a turkey to fly to Jupiter?
What makes water wet?
What is the national debt of Bolivia?
Do oysters chew their food?
Whether Daniel Webster wore suspenders?
What George Washington would have thought about Beethoven?

Now how many of these questions can you answer? Without consulting an authority, we mean. Not many of them? Then, you see, you are suffering from a lack of education. You are handicapped. You cannot rise in the world. You will always remain like you are now. You can't get ahead. You need education. Listen to what these leaders of men say about education:

I believe in education.—Woodrow Wilson.
I heartily approve of education.—Wm. H. Taft.
Education is very nice.—T. Roosevelt.

You see what this means. How do you suppose these men rose to their high positions? By education. By being able to answer, at moment's notice, questions like these. Every one of them has the Bull-Dozia in his library, ready to consult at any moment. You can have it, too. Just fill out and mail the attached coupon, which will bring you information how you can get the Bull-Dozia in 77 easy monthly payments of fifteen dollars, handsomely boxed, money refunded if not satisfactory, and does not render you liable for anything except to have your mail filled with trash for the next ten years.

Under the headings of "BOOKS WANTED" and "BOOKS FOR SALE" book-trade subscribers are given under their own names five nonpareil lines (exclusive of address) free advertising for specified books, not more than one title to the line, in any issue except special numbers, but not exceeding one hundred lines a year, a maximum of fifty lines under "Books Wanted" and fifty lines under "Books for Sale," and if over five lines are sent for either department in any one issue, or fifty lines for each department within the calendar year, the excess is at ten cents a line. Bills for this service will be rendered monthly. Objectionable books are excluded so far as they are noted.

In answering, please state edition, condition and price, including postage or express charges. Houses that will deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis should put [Cash] after their firm name. The appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the WEEKLY does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it endeavors to safeguard its columns by withholding the privileges of advertising should occasion arise, booksellers should take usual precautions in extending credit.

"Books Wanted" must be designated by actual title, not by "any."

Write your wants plainly, on one side of the sheet only. Illegible "wants" are ignored. The WEEKLY is not responsible for errors. Parties with whom there is no account must pay in advance.

Under "HELP WANTED" or for other small undisplayed advertisements, the charge is 10 cents a nonpareil line. No reduction for repeated matter. Count seven words to the line.

GOOD BOOK MAKING
vs. THE OTHER KIND

Most publishers prefer to maintain a high standard of quality in their books, especially when the cost is no higher. The following from the author of a book which we recently manufactured in its entirety illustrates the point:

"The books have reached me, and I want to thank you for the personal interest you have taken in putting out such an attractive volume. It seems to me to be about the last word in book-making art. I am more than pleased with the appearance of the book. Every suggested change which I made in the proof has been faithfully and correctly carried into the book. I appreciate the kindness you have shown in looking after the matter in such a careful way."
